[DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

DATES TO APRIL 13.

Washington News.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The Senate rejected the nomination of Thos W Sweeny, late Fenian Secretary of War as Major of the 6th Infantry.

NEW YORK, April 13.—In the Senate, Bayard of Del. was qualified and took his seat.

Mr. Sumner offered a resolution that the President be requested to furnish copies of any official opinion which may have been given by the Attorney General the solicitor of the Treasury or any other officer on the interpretation of the tenure of office, especially regarding the appointments made by the President during the recess. He understood that an opinion had been given which goes far to nullify the act. Pending Agreed.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—In the Senate Sumner in a speech supporting his resolution in regard to the opinions of the law officers of the Government respecting the tenure of office bill said this was information on the part of the Executive. The bill was about to drive a coach and six through an act of Congress. In other words, he was about to force on the country those who cannot be officers under the law.

Mr. Anthony of R. I. urged that a new rule that all resolutions calling on the Executive or any Department for information shall be first referred to a committee to report on the probable expense. Cameron of Jersey said the resolution went over.

Mr. Thayer of Nebraska called up his resolution calling for information in regard to the absence of Gov Cummings of Colorado. This went over for family on account of the absence of Buckalew of Pennsylvania.

After an Executive session the Senate adjourned.

In the Senate after an executive session a long debate took place on the question of adjournment. Chandler was willing to take the responsibility of adjourning now. If Andrew Johnson is not a knave in the way, it would be found out by July whether Congress can run the Government without him. Even himself, he would never be driven into confirming Cooper's acts.

Fessenden replied that the President had as much right to say that if a Senate stood in his way. The President did not commit an impeachable offence by nominating officers, but would if he failed to do so. The President had a right to nominate his political friends.

Conkling was willing to stay as long as necessary, in order to compel the President to have a proper regard for the public interest in making nominations.

Howe, of Wisconsin, was willing that the friends of the President should have half of the offices.

Sumner desired to remain to see the tenure of office act enforced.

Morton said that if the President persists in making such nominations the Senate will persist in rejecting them. The country would say that there was no use in staying here.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—It is the opinion of some of the ablest lawyers that the Senate should not adjourn till all the vacancies are filled. In some cases as many as three nominations have been rejected. The President sent in a large number of nominations to-day.

In the Supreme Court, Charles O'Conor filed a motion for leave to enter a bill of complaint on behalf of the State of Georgia, against Stanton, Grant and Pope for executing the Reconstruction act. Stansbury gave notice that he would resist the motion. The Secretary of War desired that he should take upon himself entire management of the case on the part of the defense. He desired that the cases of Mississippi and Georgia should be heard to-morrow. The Court said the would think upon the matter, but was not now prepared to make a definite statement.

The President is much better to-day.

The Senate ratified the treaty with the Chippewa bands of Indians residing in Minnesota, for the sale of the portion of lands now occupied by them. A reservation will be set apart for their use.

It is understood that Sumner's resolution has called forth the opinion of the Attorney-General to the effect that the Tenure of Office bill is inexpositive and does not relate to vacancies existing at the time the bill passed.

The Supreme Court has continued the hearing of the DeHaro case.

A Washington special dispatch says it is reported that the President will nominate Gen Rosecrans as Minister to Austria.

NEW YORK, April 12.—The only extra expense incurred by our Government in the acquisition of Russian America, was the cost of the telegram sent Hallock during the negotiations, asking what would be a reasonable price, and his reply from five to ten million dollars.

The World's correspondent at St. Domingo, under date of March 29th, says President Johnson's course towards a neighboring republic has created unbounded confidence in the Dominican government, and will make the acquisition of Samana practicable. It is certain, however, that the President, Cabinet, and a majority of Congress will refuse to transfer Samana to any Power without ample security for the independence and integrity of the republic.

A special dispatch to the Boston Herald says: Nothing official concerning the Fort Sanford massacre has been received at Grant's headquarters. A letter regarding the massacre has been received from responsible but unofficial sources.

A special dispatch to the Times says: Party lines are being rapidly drawn in Arizona. Illustrative is the action of the leader of the conservative party and representing the supporters of the Congressional policy, including a minority of the original Unionists. Ould and Crump are the leaders of the Confederate party, sympathizing with the Mississippi and Georgia insurrectionists.

The Herald calls on the President to provide, from a contingent fund, for an expedition to examine Russian America, and report to the next Congress.

CHICAGO, April 12.—That Stevens has written a letter to Secretary Seward warmly approving the ratification of the Russian treaty, and congratulating the Secretary upon the vote received in the Senate.

Nine thousand dollars has been subscribed by Southern and Representatives to distribute radical political documents in the South. It is intimated that the Supreme Court will dismiss the application of Mississippi for an injunction on the ground of want of original jurisdiction. The principal precedent for this decision is the Rhode Island rebellion.

Rousseau was again confirmed as Brig.-Gen by 9 majority in the Senate, and will probably fill all vacancies are filled.

The President has transmitted to the Senate a long correspondence relative to the revocation of exequatur of Gebhard Jansen, Consul of Oldenburg, at New York city. Jansen was recalled and refused to appear in court, pleading the privileges of a foreign representative. The President decided that this was an attempt to defeat the ends of justice through official position, and refused to recognize him. Letters upon this subject have been exchanged between the Prussian Minister and Secretary Seward. The Senate has called for the papers in the case.

The Republican's dispatch says: Rousseau will be sent to New Orleans to displace Sheridan.

Indications are that the Portland Congress will adopt the principle that Congress has power to regulate the suffrage question in the United States so far as relates to Congressional and Presidential elections.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The Supreme Court room was crowded. All the Judges were present at the hearing of the Mississippi injunction case on motion to file a bill. The Attorney-General made a lengthy argument, opposing the motion and trying the original jurisdiction of the court. Robt J Walker spoke on the other side. The court said it would take the motion under advisement and notify counsel if further argument is desired.

Suffering in the South.

NEW YORK, April 10.—Famine in the South is severe and increasing. Means given for relief through the Freedmen's Bureau are very inadequate and unless generous contributions are made by the public the loss of life must be appalling. Signed Archibald Russell Assistant Commissioner for Georgia, Edward Bridell Corresponding Secretary, Fred Saw Olmstead, Recording Secretary. Jas A Brown, Treasurer.

There is no doubt of the truth of the above statement. We earnestly hope generous contributions will be promptly made to this Committee by Commissioner Howard in the West. Gen Thomas, U S Senator from California; Wm. Stewart, U S Senator from Nevada, Jas W Nye, U. S Senator from Nevada, Geo W Williams, U S Senator from Oregon, H. W Corbett, U S Senator from Oregon.

We believe that liberal contributions from States and Territories of the far West would at once save many lives, relieve great suffering, and would have a most happy influence on the prosperity of the nation. Signed Brown Bros & Co., the Pacific Mail S S Co., Wm E Coleman & Co, Lord & Wager, Dabney, Morgan & Co., O H Palmer.

Crevasse in the Mississippi

NEW ORLEANS, April 10.—Another crevasse has occurred in the Parish of Baton Rouge.

Republican Convention in New York

SYRACUSE, April 10.—The Republican State Convention has nominated 10 delegates at large to the Constitutional Convention. Among them are Horace Greeley, Geo W Curtis, Geo Opdyke and W M Evarts.

Third Party in Kentucky

LOUISVILLE April 11.—The Union Democratic Convention to-day nominated Aaron Harding for Governor, Judge Kirkpatrick for Lieutenant Governor, and John M Hamilton for Attorney-General.

New York Markets

Miscellaneous

NEW YORK, April 10.—Thos Stanley, a broker of this city, has been arrested for forgery. He has been in the habit of sending letters to prominent merchants, and thus obtaining signatures he copied forged checks.

Francis H Foy, a resident of Sixth avenue shot himself with a revolver and died in 20 minutes. He had been suffering with consumption for some time.

ALBANY, April 10.—The Democratic Convention adopted an Address arraigning the Republican party for mal administration, and violation of the Constitution, and calling on the people to save the country from a threatened combination which imperils republican principles and republican government. Among the delegates are Amos Nichols, Geo Law, H. C. Murphy, D. L. Seymour and H. A. Nelson.

NEW YORK, April 12.—The Post has information which says it is secret of the success of the treaty was that the Republicans were afraid that the Democrats would make party capital out of it.

Western Union Telegraph shares 38.

Advices from Arizona received at Washington says the superintendent has sent to bring natives and other tribes under a charge for the purpose of arranging a treaty of peace between them.

The Tribune's commercial article says: P M S S continues steady.

Telegrams from Albany say that the report of the Committee of Ways and Means is favorable.

South Carolina, Virginia, Louisiana and Tennessee have sent a special committee to England to turn the tide of emigration to the South. Gov Orr is leading this movement and preparing to make systematic efforts to procure the settlement of foreigners in the South. A large number of planters are seriously engaged in an effort to obtain coolies from Cuba.

The Tribune says the views of Eastern Senators on the subject of the Russian treaty were overborne by the clamor of Nebraska, Nevada, Oregon, Kansas and Minnesota. Howard [illegible] to divide the region into six Territories.

The Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Co. has been organized under the laws of New York, with a capital of five millions. President A. T. Wilmett, of the Home Insurance Co. Vice President, W. H. They spoke about several northern tribes banding together for war and making overtures to southern tribes to join them, and predicted that the whites would have their hands full. The indications still favor a grand Indian confederation and bloody war.

Gomez and Suarez have resigned. Tabaga has command. The seige is closely maintained. Water has been cut off and the last bullock in the city has been killed. The Havana Diario reports that Matamoras was at Cualahuala, but does not state how he got there.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Vera Cruz advices of the 2d says that a disagreement occurred between the Imperialist commander and General Gonzalez, in consequence of which the latter threw up his command. The disagreement is supposed to extend to other officers, who will probably follow the Generals example. Gomez was commander of the Imperialist forces at Vera Cruz. Puebla is reported to have been captured by the Liberals. The Herald's Vera Cruz correspondence, dated March 30, says that the city is so well defended that it will be impossible to capture it by assault. Within ten days or four hours after the French left, an attack might have been successful. The new troops have gained confidence in their leaders, and it is impossible to tell how long the seige will last.

The Daily Oregonian.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, APRIL 17, 1867.

The Point of Departure.

In the last public address delivered by Mr. Lincoln, three days before his assassination, he explained what his action had been in the matter of reconstruction. He had no fixed policy, and did not claim that he possessed the right to establish one. The proceedings which he had taken he regarded as merely preliminary, and subject to the action of Congress before the restoration could be permanently effected. Alluding in this last speech to his message of 1863, and the suggestions it contained in regard to reconstruction, he said: "I distinctly stated that this was not the only plan which might possibly be acceptable, and I also distinctly protested that the Executive claimed no right to say when or whether members should be admitted from the revolted States." He also stated that whenever he should become convinced that any action he had already taken in this matter was adverse to the public interests, he would abandon the plan he had proposed. How different the course which this language foreshadowed from the obstinate conduct of his successor.

In this speech the lamented President said that one of the members of his Cabinet had urged him to "omit the protest of his own power in regard to the admission of members of Congress." This member of the Cabinet was Mr. Seward, and from the remark of Mr. Lincoln we are able to discover where that advice has come from which has caused Johnson to step out of his own province in the attempt to force the rebel members into Congress, and thus to do a thing which President Lincoln especially disclaimed any right to interfere with.

Whatever was done by Mr. Lincoln with a view to the reorganization of the rebel States, was regarded by him as subject to the approval or disapproval of Congress. He knew that the powers of that body under the Constitution were alone adequate to settle so grave a question. Nor was it until several months after his successor took the Presidential office that the agency and power of Congress were denied. For three-quarters of a year Johnson kept pretending that his policy was merely an "experiment," and that the sanction of Congress was necessary to its validity. But he soon became possessed of the idea that he had full powers in the premises. The mistaken counsels with which Mr. Seward had endeavored to mislead Mr. Lincoln were used more successfully with Mr. Johnson, and the President began to dictate to Congress about the admission of members. The rest of his wrongful assumptions of power followed as a matter of course, and he assumed the right which Mr. Lincoln always disclaimed, to manage the whole business without the agency of that department of the Government with which the final decision must necessarily rest.

The above extracts from the last public address of Mr. Lincoln, though brief, serve to illustrate the difference between his actions and those of his successor in regard to this grave and yet unsettled question. They also show that the origin of Johnson's ill-advised and head-strong policy was that same pernicious counsel from Secretary Seward which was rejected by Mr. Lincoln and afterwards adopted by Mr. Johnson.

The True System.

A proper distribution of labor between agriculture and manufactures is the policy Oregon should strive for, as being that which is best adapted to the situation, wants and resources of the State. Agriculture alone cannot be relied on as a basis of prosperity, because we cannot with certainty depend upon having a foreign market. To create a home market for the products of agriculture is therefore a necessity for our farmers; and this can be done only by building up manufactures, by diverting the labor of many persons into this broad field, by creating a mutuality of wants between different classes of community, and providing means for supplying them. A home market for agricultural products may be had here the same as in New England and Pennsylvania, if the same methods are employed to build it up. Some of our States are extensively engaged in various branches of manufacturing. A large portion of their people are therefore devoted to other employments than that of cultivating the soil. These classes are consumers of agricultural products, and in every community where manufacturing is extensively carried on, the farmer finds an excellent home market. It is estimated that the wages paid out in making a ton of railroad iron in Pennsylvania amount to sixty-five dollars. Of course the greater part of this money is spent at home to obtain means of subsistence, and a full share of it goes into the hands of the farmer. This example serves to illustrate how useful manufacturing enterprises of all kinds are to the farming community. Under this system the producer is brought side by side with consumer, and each contributes to the other's support.

In the course of an article on this subject, the New York Tribune says: "We hold that the true interest of our people and of mankind requires that the number and proportion of producers of wealth, as well as their efficiency in producing it, be everywhere and permanently increased, and that the number and proportion of exchangers or distributors of other men's products, and of all parasites on the industrial body politic, be steadily and evermore diminished. This is the key-note of our entire political and social philosophy." This condition of things contemplates the establishment of that diversity of pursuits which is the basis of all true prosperity.

Flour is being shipped this year from the Pacific coast to New York and also to foreign ports. There is little margin for profit for Oregon flour, and probably there will not be again for years a general foreign demand equal to that which has prevailed for some months past. The demand from the mines has about ceased, and is not likely to revive. If, therefore, agriculture is hereafter to be a profitable business, we must have a home market. We need here the system that prevails in New England and the Middle States. There the farmer has a market near his own door, and finds a steady demand for what he produces. The true relations between the various branches of labor are established and a reciprocity of wants and interests created. A system like this is what Oregon needs, and is what the necessities of her situation will compel her to adopt. There is no other road to prosperity.

The Charlottesville (Va.) Chronicle says:

We think the Southern people have done enough in the way of honor; it is time now to get bread to eat, and shelter, and rest.

The trouble with our people is that they cannot accept the inevitable. If negro suffrage is a determined fact, why struggle against the fiat of God? When the pitcher is broken at the fountain, why protract one's tears? Is not there a silver lining to the blackest cloud? May it not be that we do but take in the whole of the business? May it not be that there is a blessing hid in all these thunders? May it not be that our colored friends will conclude to be wise friends, and that those of them will seek the assistance of their "old masters" in throwing their votes? May it not be that the whites here will control the colored vote without serious difficulty?

So there is nothing objectionable in negro suffrage if the South and the Democratic party can only control the negro vote. The universal opinion of rebels and Democrats is that negroes are not too "ignorant" or too "degraded" to vote, if they will only vote their ticket.

President Johnson is sick with the liver complaint. He has made no speeches lately, and therefore has had no chance to relieve himself of his surplus bile. A few more efforts like those at Cleveland and Cincinnati would cure him. His physicians should prescribe another journey around the circle.

Prosperity in Idaho.

[From the Owyhee Avalanche.]

Any one at all acquainted with the present surface improvements and under-ground developments of this Territory, and will allow his thoughts to range beyond the confines of his own place of business, can but admit that its future growth in wealth and population is certain to be equal if not superior to any under Uncle Sam's jurisdiction. Notwithstanding it has been greatly misrepresented regarding its climate and mineral and agricultural productiveness, it has been gradually growing in favor at home and abroad. This growth has been slow but healthy. The rush in 1863 to its placer mines discovered in 1861 and 1862 was not unlike that to all such newly found diggings. Every one could not be successful in realizing his expectations, and per habit and disappointments the most untruthful reports were told and published abroad by the unlucky and indolent ones who probably never were in the Territory long enough to form a just opinion of its resources. It always requires more or less time to correct these false impressions. As men of business, energy and industry get a square foothold and make visits abroad, they represent the facts and by returning show their representations sincere, the Territory gets a fair consideration and the increase in population is of a more thrifty and permanent quality. Until the Territory is at least superficially prospected for minerals, it is sure to be subject to flights of "honest miners and traders" from one point to another. No matter how rich and prosperous one mining section really is, let a newly discovered one be reported, and the latter will soon be stocked by recruits from the former. So eager are men for a better thing in a new camp that many will spend the earnings of a year and much time in satisfying their expectant hopes. A thorough surface examination of the Territory will tend to make the population more stable and contented; therefore we would rather encourage prospectors than otherwise.

While the adventurous portion of the people are finishing up the explorations, the remainder are busy as bees in accumulating fortunes, projecting lines of communications for news, passengers and freight, and developing the permanent natural resources of the early discovered places where a few years' settlement has removed the charms which placer mines alone can create. This new order of business may be said to have already been inaugurated in all the older counties of Idaho—say in Owyhee, Ada, Boise, Alturas, Nez Perce and Idaho. Owyhee and Alturas counties are doubtless the richest in quartz, so far as discovered, and each are attracting much interest abroad and are receiving invigorating financial aid to an extent which must soon dispense with such stimulus as a necessity to a wonderful state of prosperity. Owyhee is specially prominent in Iowa, Illinois and New York, with a fair prospect of favorable attention in San Francisco. The professional miner, mechanic and common laborer are sure of employment here at fair wages. The Lemhi excitement will be favorable to day laborers, as many have left, and in the next few months a great many more will be needed than are now in camp. Two Iowa companies will soon commence work extensively; the New York & Owyhee Company will largely increase its labor soon; the Cosmos is adding to its list of workmen, and the Ore Fino & Morning Star Company will require a heavy force within a month. We only mention the certain operations, while there is the best reason to believe that double the labor will be needed that we have indicated. The news from Flint is of the most cheering character.

We speak particularly of Owyhee because it is at home and by us better understood. All reports indicate much activity throughout the Territory. Companies that have operated with success are bound to enlarge their operations, and those that have known only assessments, with one or two exceptions, are preparing to reach profits and that are long. As they become better acquainted with the nature of the ore and its extent their confidence is increased.

Emigration to the West.

The editor of the Denver (Colorado) News, who has taken a tour through the Atlantic and Mississippi valley States, thus alludes to the prospect of a great Western emigration this year:

From indications that seem certain, we are led to believe that this year will witness one of the greatest emigrations westward ever known in our country. This emigration will be mostly of the laboring classes, the agricultural interests being largely represented. The people are full of this idea of western travel, and at every town and hamlet in the western States, the prospects of the various points in the Territories, are being anxiously and continually inquired after.

The reason for this is obvious. In the States times have reached a state of dullness perhaps never known in the previous history of the country. Especially is this the case in the cities bordering upon the Mississippi and Missouri rivers where our observations were made. Everybody seemed to be out of employment, and the general aspect of the places was much like that one witnesses in a New England village on Sunday. Great capital letters informing the reader that premises were "to let" or "for sale" stared us in the face at every turning, and even in what a few months since constituted the commercial centers of the towns visited, those signs of business stagnation leered at us on all sides. The people were out of business, and everybody was loafing around, or seeking something to do. In Clinton and Davenport, Iowa, and Rock Island, Illinois, this state of things was particularly noticeable. The place first mentioned claims a population four times that of Denver, and yet does not do as much business in a week as is transacted here in a single day. The same condition of things is found at Council Bluffs and Omaha, even though the latter had puffed up real estate to a fanciful figure—four fold above its actual value—in anticipation of becoming a new Chicago.

PERSONAL VANITY.—The vanity that survives the decay of every personal charm is, of all "its foibles, the most ridiculous. One can hardly blame a beautiful woman for rejoicing in the admiration to which her mirror tells her she has a right, or for setting off to the best advantage the physical perfections with which heaven has endowed her; but the withered grandame who was once a Hebe is not excused by her withered antecedents for attempting the role of Hebe in spite of faded cheeks, lack-lustre eyes, and hair that has depreciated from gold to pewter, and is lacquered over to conceal the change. Looking glasses tell the truth to three-score as to sixteen. They reflect saffron as overlaid with manufactured bloom; they tell the enameled elder to her face that it is unnatural. And what the mirror says silently, society repeats with a sneer. It is impossible to mistake rouge for the tint of nature. The imposture is apparent to every observer as if "beware of paint" were written on the forehead of the pink-saucered lady. Pale young women as sallow old ones are much given to coloring the cheek, in this age of personal artifice. Hundreds of girls between the ages of sixteen and twenty paint their faces at least as often as they clean their teeth.

Never were there more counterfeits of nature in circulation than at this our day. It is the fashion to be spurious. Grey heads are scarcer than grey horses. Costume so cut as to imply swelling flexors and extensors where there is not a muscle to the sleeve, and pantaloons so shaped that mere drumsticks seem herculean. A plumpness that is akin to that of the "lay figgers" in the mantilla ature, pervades the petticoat world; and, in short one-half of the general public is cotton, wire, whalebone and superfluous broadcloth and kerseymere.

MAINE UNDER ICE.—Agassiz, in his article on "Glacial Phenomena in Maine," in the March number of the Atlantic Monthly, arrives at the comfortable conclusion that the ice fields which once poured from the north over New England to the sea, had a thickness of at least five or six thousand feet. It gives one a stupendous idea of the immense forces which have operated on the earth's surface to imagine a field of ice as thick as Mount Washington is high advancing slowly but irresistibly over the broad surface of New England, spanning the mountain tops and leaving the valleys between untouched, and writing as it moved its own record on the rocks. "The aspect of the coast of New England," says the Professor, "must then have been very similar to that of Greenland in its colder portions." We should think so! "Mount Desert itself must have been a miniature Spitsbergen, and colossal icebergs floated off from Somes Sound into the Atlantic ocean, as they do now a-days from Magdelena Bay." How lucky all this happened before our day!

A FUNNY STORY.—An incident in the history of the rebel Congress, suppressed at the time, has just come to light. A short time before the fall of Richmond, while the rebel Congress was deeply concerned about the cruelty and barbarity of the North, a woman of that city walked into the House of Representatives and attacked three members with a cowhide, castigating them mercilessly. At last the Speaker caught the virago in his arms, and held her there until she went into hysterics. She said her intention was to chastise the entire body because of its abuse of the North. The House passed a resolution to keep the matter secret, and the Richmond papers never mentioned it.

"My opinion is," said a philosophical old lady of much experience and observation, "that any man as dies on washing-day does it out of pure spite."

"For some time past a suit has been pending in the Circuit Court of this county in which Susan Rigger was plaintiff, and the Travelers' Insurance Company of Chicago were defendants. The suit was brought to recover the sum of $5,000 life insurance, upon the allegation of the death of her husband, Monroe C. Rigger, who, it was claimed, had been drowned in the Lake, about fifteen miles northwest of Cleveland, on the night of the 20th of July last, between nine and ten o'clock. He was engaged in the capacity of deck-hand on the brig Mechanic, and while acting under the orders of the second mate he fell, it was said, from the bowsprit, and was never seen again. The fact of his death was attested by no less than ten affidavits, including those of the captain of the vessel, James Todd; the owner, Wm. Daniels, and the second mate Joseph wagner. The latter claimed to be on deck in charge of the watch at the time, and under his orders Rigger went out on the bowsprit to fix a sail, when his foot slipped and he went overboard.

The suit has been dismissed by the filing of a document signed by the plaintiff, Susan Rigger, under date of February 25th, in which she acknowledges for a valuable consideration, the nature of which will appear in the sequel, she relinquishes her claim to the insurance.

* * * * * * * * *

At length it was discovered that the whole affair, from first to last, was a conspiracy on the part of Rigger, his wife, and the second mate, to defraud the insurance company. It was ascertained that brig Mechanic was not fifteen miles from land at the time of Rigger's disappearance. On the contrary, the second mate, who was in collusion with the other conspirators, had run the vessel so near the shore that night that she was in danger of being stranded. The appointed hour having arrived for the development of the plot, the mate, at a signal agreed upon, ordered Rigger to go out on the bowsprit and fix a sail. The man obeyed, and in a few moments dropped into the water. Wagner immediately raised the alarm, 'Man overboard,' the crew was summoned, a vessel was swung round and a boat was lowered from the stern. The second mate took the management of the boat, and by a dexterous movement he managed to move off in a contrary direction to that taken by the confederate. The supposed drowning man did not utter any loud cry for help. He was well provided with a life preserver, and having not more than three-quarters of a mile between him and the shore he was soon on dry land in safety. Wagner as may be supposed, soon gave up the search for the man. He rejoined him, shortly after this event, in Buffalo, where he took the affidavits of his death, and brought them to this city.

The insurance company, on becoming acquainted with these facts, went to Mrs. Rigger, and induced her to make a clean breast of it. She confessed everything, and gave the full details of the conspiracy which had been concocted between her husband, the mate and herself. Having unburdened her mind to the satisfaction of all parties concerned, she deemed it prudent to withdraw from the city altogether. Her husband is now said to be sailing on the ocean, and the mate has also departed into unknown regions to screen himself from the police, who are making every effort to discover his whereabouts."

"Susan," said an Irishman to his fellow-servant, "what are the bells ringing for?" "In honor of the princess's birthday," was the reply. "Be asy, jewel," rejoined pat; "none of your tricks on travelers; twas the Prince of Wales's on the 9th, and how can it be his sister's twelve days after, unless, indade, they are twins?"

"Time is money" only when it "passes."

Miss HANNAH D. GARRETT, 523 Spruce street, Philadelphia, who has used a Grover & Baker Machine for eight years, and is familiar with the Wheeler & Wilson, Florence, and Singer Machines, says of the Grover & Baker: "I have used it on all kinds of work, and my customers prefer it to any other. I like it better than any other; the stitch is more elastic and more perfect than any others; and after washing, it presents a better appearance than the work of any other machine. The tension adapts itself immediately to every varying thickness of fabric, and the bottom can be used without re-winding. In quilting, it makes the very perfect stitch, and no other machine embroiders but this. WM. CUNARD & Co., Agents, Front street, Portland.

CONGRESS AT ITS LAST SESSION HAVING passed a BANKRUPT LAW, it is now within the power of every man that is hopelessly in debt, to free himself from the press of debts which swamp his action, and which he is wholly unable otherwise to discharge. The District Court of the United States, which sits alone in the city of Portland, has, under this law, an exclusive jurisdiction of all cases in Bankruptcy. The undersigned have procured a copy of the law and are ready, as soon as a Register is appointed, to attend promptly to procuring discharges in Bankruptcy for all who may feel disposed to favor them with their patronage.

Also attention paid to procuring LETTERS PATENT FOR NEW INVENTIONS.

CAPITAL STOCK, $1,000,000!

Directors:

JOHN PARROTT, CHAS. E. McLANE,
WM. C. RALSTON, A. HAYWARD,
LOUIS A. CARNETT.

LOUIS A. CARNETT.....President and Manager.
JOHN HEWSTON, Jr.....Chemist and Superintendent.

THIS COMPANY HAVING GREATLY enlarged their Refining Works, and introduced many other important improvements, are pleased to announce that they feel warranted in again reducing materially their terms of doing business.

THE TARIFF OF CHARGES

Which they now submit to the public—considered with reference to the cost of materials and labor—is lower than in any other part of the world, and secures to the mining interest of this coast an important increase in both the mining and commercial value of bullion.

Their charges hereafter will be as follows:

FOR ASSAYING DEPOSITS FOR UNPARTED GOLD BARS.

One-eighth of one per cent. (heretofore a quarter) for all amounts over $1,000, and two dollars for any smaller sum. Returns made in twenty-four hours.

FOR ASSAYING DEPOSITS FOR UNPARTED SILVER BARS.

Two dollars for the gold contained, up to $1,000, and one-eighth of one per cent. for all amounts over that sum, and one per cent. on the silver contained. Returns made in twenty-four hours.

FOR REFINING DEPOSITS MADE FOR COIN OR FINE BARS.

On bullion under 900 parts gold, 2 cents per ounce.
On bullion from 900@900 parts gold, 4 cents per ounce.
On bullion from 750@750 parts gold, 6 cents per ounce.
On bullion from 750@840 parts gold, 8 cents per ounce.

Above 950 the only charge will be for coinage. But there will be no charge for refining less than two dollars.

FOR COINING GOLD.

This charge will be the same as at the Mint—a half of one per cent.—and which is paid by us to that institution. But there will be no charge in future for making fine gold or silver bars from bullion refined by us.

RETURNS IN COIN IN FORTY-EIGHT HOURS.

Silver contained in deposits for coin will be accounted for at the same rate customary at the Mint.

Gold bars of other Assayers, in good standing, will be refined by us at the highest market rates.

Dust and bullion can be forwarded to us from any part of the country, and returns made through Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Express.

CHARGES AT U. S. BRANCH MINT.

For the convenience of those not familiar with the terms of the Mint, we subjoin the tariff of charges now in force at that institution:

For refining bullion under 900 parts gold, 3 cents per ounce.
For refining bullion from 900@800 parts gold, 5 cents per ounce.
For refining bullion from 800@750 parts gold, 7 cents per ounce.
For refining bullion from 750@830 parts gold, 11 cents per ounce.
For refining bullion from 830@949½ parts gold, 14 cents per ounce.

The charge for coinage is half of one per cent., and the charge for melting fine silver bars, the same.

Comparing the mint value of deposits for coinage, with the proceeds of unparted gold bars sold in the market—assuming that the bars have cost ½ of one per cent.—they must be sold at the following per rates to equal the return which would have been made had they been deposited for coinage:

850 per to equal Mint return, at refining charge of 14 cents.
845 per to equal Mint return, at refining charge of 14 cents.
855 per to equal San Francisco A. & R. Works return, at refining charge of 8 cents. jan1d3p3m

HAIN' HEADER AND THRESHER.—This novel machine was driven through our streets yesterday afternoon, with the gearing connected, so that an opportunity was presented to witness its manner of working. The main weight of the machine is supported upon two massive wheels upon which are fastened the various driving gears, and upon those wheels goes the reaper, constructed much after those wheels goes the reaper, constructed much after the ordinary way. The thresher is supported upon the driving wheels and a third wheel in the rear, which is fastened to the lower end of a pivot axle and serves as a bearing to the whole machine. There is nothing remarkable about it except the combination of the reaper and thresher. The heads are turned toward the cutting knife by an ordinary reel, and when clipped they fall upon a transverse endless belt which carries and empties them on another similar belt running at right angles with the first. Thence, they are carried and whirled into the concave in which revolves the threshing cylinder. The grain passes through the threshing screening process, as in other threshers, and the straw being taken away by self-acting rakes and discharged at the rear. The clean grain is discharged on one side and the chaff on the opposite side. The cutting knife is eight feet in length, and it will reap a swath of that length. When at work in grain, eight or ten horses are required to do effective work—four before the machine and four or six on the right and left sides of the thresher and in rear of the reaping apparatus. The machine exhibited yesterday is rudely constructed, but it illustrates the principle fully, and we are informed that it has done excellent practical work. The Messrs. Darin and Mr. Mitcham are the joint owners of the patent right for the United States.

BY THE RIVER AND RAIL.—An hour at Milwaukie is all the time to see that everything is moving off about as usual. The Standard Mill is turning out its usual amount of flour, superfine and extra flour; a chair factory contributes somewhat to the wealth and taste of the village; there is a fine public school, and the Good Templars are flourishing, while the whisky mills are getting the best of their liquors—weaker. The Templars number about fifty members and are increasing the number at every meeting. At Oswego, the Iron Company's works are now nearing completion under the superintendence of Col. Shaw, H. Bolton. It is expected that the works will be in blast by the first of June. About a dozen new buildings, great and small, (mostly small,) have been built in the village within the last six months. Directly opposite the village is the ancient town site of La Harpe, laid out by Capt. Baker. Careful nursing, even, failed to make it live more than a town on paper, and most people have long since forgotten that a city ever existed there, even in the imaginative brain of the soil's proprietor. It may not be generally known, though it ought to be, that a good wagon road over the ridge from Milwaukie to Oswego is a source of loss than thirty miles. There is also a road constructed a good wagon road over the same ridge to the Columbia river, at any reasonable distance from Portland.

A FRESH LOT OF CHINOOK SALMON just received at the Union Fish Market, Washington street.

A GREAT CONVENTION—IMMENSE RUSH.—Nearly all the candidates, delegates and visitors to the Vancouver Convention, were in this city yesterday. During the day, many of them visited Harman Bros.' Clothing Store and fitted themselves out with new and fashionable suits fit to wear to Congress or any other port. Harman Bros. were unanimously nominated by the entire Convention in their store assembled, as the cheapest and fairest-dealing clothiers on this coast.

The best meals in town, every one should remember, are served up daily at the LAFAYETTE RESTAURANT, under Ore Fino Hall. All the luxuries and delicacies of the season will be found on the table.

PERRY DAVIS' VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER.

THE GREAT FAMILY MEDICINE OF THE AGE!

Pain Killer taken internally, should be adulterated with milk or water, and sweetened with sugar if desired, or made into a gruel with molasses. For a cough, a few drops on sugar eaten will be more effective than anything else. For sore throat, gargle the throat with a mixture of Pain Killer and water, and relief is immediate and the cure positive.

It should not be forgotten that the Pain Killer is equally as good to take internally as to use externally. Each bottle is wrapped with full directions for its use. Bypepsia can be and is cured every day by the use of Perry Davis' Pain Killer. This is the most wonderful and valuable medicine ever known for this disease. Its action upon the system is entirely different from any other preparation known. The patient, while taking this medicine, may eat anything the appetite craves. Sold by all medicine dealers. mh20dawlm

TAKE NO MORE UNPLEASANT AND UNSAFE REMEDIES for unpleasant and dangerous diseases. Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH.

Bronchitis or Chronic Sore Throat.—It is attended with irritation of the bronchial tubes, which every time the air we breathe hits the lungs. The irritation produces sore throat, hoarseness, coughing, and sometimes spitting of matter streaked with blood. If it is neglected it will extend down to the lungs, and settles into confirmed consumption. ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will be found a most valuable remedy for curing this disease, and prevent its running into the consumption. For sale by dealers in family medicine generally. ja30

HAS CONSTANTLY ON HAND GROUND AND ROASTED COFFEE, GREEN COFFEE of the best qualities. CREAM OF TARTAR and SPICES of all sorts.

The undersigned, who has always enjoyed public confidence for the excellent quality of his Coffee, neglects nothing to justify the good name acquired by his productions, the sale of which daily increases. The acknowledged superiority of his merchandise, which commands here, and in the markets of the interior, a relatively higher price, excites the cupidity of some manufacturers, and every day he sees increasing the number of those who, by counterfeit or imitation of his mark, seek to deceive the public, palming upon them their inferior productions for the genuine G. VENARD CHARTRES COFFEE. This fraud can deceive nobody after a trial; but only adds to the favorable opinion of th consumers, the very flattering though unwilling testimony of the counterfeiters. Nevertheless, buyers should be forewarned, and placed on their guard against this practice.

The University

HOMESTEAD ASSOCIATION

THE LANDS OF THE ABOVE-NAMED ASSOCIAtion are situated in San Francisco and are eligibly and most desirably located, adjoining the grounds purchased by the Presbyterian University Society, on which College buildings are to be at once erected. The site is less than thirty minutes ride from Montgomery street; lying just west or back of the lands of the South San Francisco Homestead and Railroad Association and the Bay View Park, almost within a stone's throw of ST. MARY'S COLLEGE.

The tract will require little or no grading, there being scarcely a single lot on which it would not be feasible to build without any change of grade. It commands a

Beautiful View of the Bay,

And its opposite shore, and has a soil of extreme richness. So great are the natural attractions of the spot that very many of the wealthy citizens of San Francisco have already purchased whole blocks in the same tract, and design building residences thereon.

The Rev. E. Thomas, D. D.,

Is President of the Association; Lester L. Robinson, formerly Vice President of the Sacramento Railroad Company, is the Treasurer, and Thomas B. Lewis, formerly of Portland, Secretary.

Four lots, 25x150 feet each, constitute a share, costing $315—paid in monthly installments of $10 each, after the first payment of $10 has been made.

Maps and books giving full information of the workings of the Association can be obtained at the store of J. L. PARRISH & CO.

It is an easy and a cheap way for young men to procure property which will in a few years make them independent.

The Hidden Treasure.

[From "All the Year Round."

Troubles, calamities, judgments of God—ay, sir, they seem terrible when they come one after another on a man's head; but, to my thinking, a most terrible thing of all that can happen to a bad mangis that the Almighty should forget him, and let him alone. Sit down, sir, and let me tell you what happened in this house, and round about it, when I was a lad, and what has happened since; all winding from one clue into one piece.

Right away from this spot to the abbey was forest then; the house had been the lodge, and is called so yet. When the plough goes over the land, you may trace to this day the black circles where the great oaks stood and were cut down; and their roots charred to rot. Up the steep broken ground at the back were twisted, knotted, bearded crabtrees. I cannot tell you how many generations may have said in spring that the rosy blossoms of them were lovely, nor how many may have set their autumn teeth on edge with the sour wild fruit—orchard it was once; perhaps the sweet veins of the apple-grafts had run dry, and the natural stocks had put forth savage life again in their neglect. I cannot tell. The rift that goes down to the Southampton Water is just what it was—morass at bottom, and up the sides clothed with hollies, firs, bracken, and all luxuriant greenneases.

As far back as my memory serves me, the Lodge Farm was tenanted by a family of the name of Heistone, and it is of my master, Rufus Hulstone, that I am going to speak as a man God let alone. The Lodge has been gutted by fire since his time, but it was then kept in good repair, and looked outside much as it must have looked in old days, when ladies on a journey, whom the monks might not entertain in the abbey, rode up to its door and claimed a night's lodging and hospitality. There is enough of the ancient walls left to suggest what it was originally, but only just enough; and inside all the fine old stonework and woodwork are gone. But the shafts of the oriel window stood the fire, and that was re-glazed, and there it is—a grand window, sir, and most beautiful for seeing the moonlight on the water. It was and is the dormitory for the farm-servants.

I must ask you to go back with me to one night at the end of the last century, when there was everywhere upsetting, overturning and war to the world, and we were fighting the French at sea. It was harvest time, and the moon was nearly at full. The oriel window let in the light broad as day, but a more wakeful light. I can sleep in the sun, but the moon shining in my face is like a bad dream to me even now. I had my straw mattress in the darkest corner, but a very little stir would rouse me on those clear nights. At the time I am speaking of, there were only two farm-servants housed at the Lodge besides myself, the shepherd and wagoner—young men, and I but a lad to do odd jobs about the place, and help everybody.

Yes, sir, I was a sailor since. I have been round the world, and have seen fifty years of adventures. But for an event to which I shall presently come, here I might have dug and delved all my life at the earth, never raising my eyes above it. I thank God that He has given me a wider view of His world.

Shaw, the shepherd, was a solitary sort of man. I hardly remember the sound of his voice. He always whistled to his dog, and liked the dumb beast's company better than any Christian's. Waggoner was a rough, good natured fellow, not reader with kicks and curses than most of his kind. He hardly belongs to my tale. Moonlight or storm were all the same to him. He slept and snored to drown the roaring of the wind in the big chimney on the loudest night. But shepherd was a restless mortal. He knew the stars, and had a deal of queer out-of-the-way knowledge that was not good for him. Not a bird could cry but it was an omen, not a leaf could fall but it was a sign. He knew all the ways of the forest, and all the wild stories people told of what had been done in it since the days when the Norman kings who conquered England made hunting-grounds of their corn-fields and habitations south and north, and were tracked and taken by strange deaths, they or their sons, as they pursued the game over cold hearth-stones. When Shaw did talk it was of such things as these; and he would always dwell on the dark end of his legends with a fierce relishing pleasure. He could neither read nor write, but he had a wonderful memory and noticing power; and if he had got the chance, I say, sir, he might have been made a scholar. But he did not get the chance.

A favorite notion of his was that somewhere in the abbey there was hidden treasure. What monastic ruin has not the tradition of rich coffined relics and secret hoards of gold? Ours has, of course. Shaw spent his Sunday afternoons there instead of in church, and it was a joke against him that he spent them questing for gold—a joke he sullenly resented as no joke, being convinced in his mind that a treasure there was, and that sooner or later he should find it. And the strangest thing of all is, sir, that he did find it. I know he found it, though I never handled it, nor even saw the glitter of the coin. He found it, and it was his destruction.

That night of which I have spoken was the time, and I was the witness. He had lain down in his place, and had fallen asleep while I was still waking. He tossed, he groaned, he sat up. I think I can see him plainly now, his white face that never tanned, his black hair and eyes, in the ghostly brightness of the moonlit room. He scared me wider awake than ever; but presently he dropped into another uneasy sleep, from which he started a second time. The same thing was repeated; but at the third time he got up and dressed himself with stealthy haste, saying over and over, with a low shocking glee that sounded awful in the hush, 'I see where it is! I see where it is!'

I lay very still, very still, holding my breath until he went out, when I put on my clothes and went out after him. He had left the door ajar, and I saw him just disappearing under the trees, with a pick over his shoulder. I said to myself that he would kill me if he discovered me following him. But I followed, slipping from tree to tree, and from shadow to shadow. More than once I thought I saw another man besides himself; but when I looked earnestly to make the figure out, there was none. Shaw never glanced behind him—indeed, he was, no doubt, so possessed by his object that he did not think of pursuit and detection. He came to the abbey, and went direct to a certain spot in the ruins (which I will show you sir, if you please,) where the moonlight was very strong. Without delay he tore the long grass away at the foot of the wall (there is no ivy on that part,) and slowly, with his pick, lowered out a stone. Then he knelt down. I did not dare to go near enough to see what it was he took from behind it and clutched to his breast with a loud peal of laughter; but something he did take out, and take away, forgetting the pick that he had dropped in the grass. Fast he set off towards the cliffs. Where could he be going, I wondered. He went down and down the rift, and, when he had got nearly to the bottom, he stopped all on a sudden. I supposed that he had just remembered the pick. He did not, however, return for it, but began to scrape away the dead leaves and soil with his hands under a clump of hollies, and there he concealed his treasure, carefully covering it up and drawing the boughs to the earth to hide that it had been disturbed. It was likely to be safe enough; few people went or came that way.

Then, sure that he would not remove it again that night, I crept, and crawled, and ran to get back to my bed, and had but a little time to cast off my clothes and hide myself breathless in my gloomy corner when he returned. The rest of the night I slept, and I hope so did he, though he was up before me, and when I looked into the tool-shed there was the pick in its usual place, as that he must have fetched it from the ruins the very first thing in the morning.

All that morning there was about Shaw an air of suppressed excitation, which Heistone, when he saw him, remarked with a sneer. 'You'll be finding that pot o' gold soon, Shaw,' said he. 'You have a look of good luck about you to-day.'

'That's more than I can say for you, master,' was his reply.

I had no chance of getting to the abbey, much as I wanted to view the place where Shaw had prised the stone out of the wall. I was clearing the flower borders in the garden until dusk, and as I was putting by my tools he came and took away the spade. What I began at once to anticipate happened that night. Shaw got up when the Lodge was all quiet, and stole out again, I following him as before. For ever so long he went up and down the orchard, seeking a good place to hide his treasure. Where three of the biggest crab-trees stand in a triangle, their roots writhed in and out of the earth, he dug a hole, neither wide nor deep, for I looked at it while he was gone to the rift to bring his treasure. When he returned with it he sat down and nursed it, hugged it, wept over it, seemed hardly able to put it out of his sight. I got back safe, and about half an hour after he came back too.

Now I had the shepherd's secret I did not like it; it became the terror of my life. He gave up his Sunday afternoon visits to the ruins, and sat either in the orchard itself or in the kitchen which looked up to it. I had opportunities enough now of going to the ruins, but I never ventured. He had taken on to be suspicious. From being a silent man, he became a mutterer, but the stealthy watchfulness of his eyes was everywhere, especially on me. I hardly dared sleep of nights lest he should do me a mischief, and when they grew long with the coming on of winter, I began to cast about in my mind how I would run away from the farm and go to sea. But I kept my plan very close for fear Shaw would forestall me with his hand or his knife at my throat.

Running away was, however, not so easy, and at last I told Heistone, one morning when we were afield together, that I wanted to leave the Lodge, and I told him why. I never knew till then that master was a bad man.

'Shah!' hissed he as he gathered my meaning, and glanced over my shoulder either way, as if the birds in the air might carry the matter to Shaw.

As I looked at him I wished heartily that I had kept my own counsel, for now I saw that I had two enemies to dread instead of one, and that Heistone was the more dangerous. For the rest of that day he never let me out of his sight. He was plotting what he would do. Early the next morning he sent Shaw off to Southampton with some sheep for the butcher, and me he ordered into the garden to work under the mistress' eye.—He disappeared for a few hours, but about noon he came and told me to go down the rift and gather an armful of holly to deck the Lodge for Christmas, which was close at hand. This was, indeed, unless my memory fails me, Christmas eve.

The finest hollies and the richest red berries grow near the bottom, and I cut a big bundle and pocketed my knife again, when I was suddenly pounced upon by two kidnappers of the press-gang, which was always on the prowl in the great war time. "In the King's name," said they; but I know it was Heistone's doing, though I held my tongue, except to tell him I'd as lief serve his majesty as my master. The men laughed and one of them answered that there was then no love lost between us, for my master had given them a gold-en guinea apiece to rid him of me.

My adventures at sea have no place in this history, so I must ask you, sir, to skip over the three years' cruise that made a sailor of me, and land with me on the Hard at Portsmouth. I had a shore leave of three weeks while the War Horse took in stores for another cruise, and as the weather was fine and the hay-harvest in progress, I walked over to Southampton to look up my old friends. The first I dropt on was a waggoner coming into town with a load of grass, and he told me a deal that was news. The master, he said was flourishing like a green bay-tree. He had added the High Farm to the Lodge Farm, and was growing mighty rich and prosperous; and bringing up his sons like young squires. I told him again how I had been caught and carried off by the press-gang (not mentioning Heistone's share in it, of course,) and how I was glad of it since I'd tasted salt water, and he said they had heard of it at the Lodge. Two queer things happened on the same day; I had disappeared and the shepherd had gone stark mad. By bit and bit, from one and another, I got the whole story, but I got it from Heistone himself chiefly. I was not afraid of any man now, and I went openly to see my old master, and ask him how he did; taking heed, you may be sure, not to betray that I knew the good turn he had done me three years and a half before.

I thought he was a little uneasy at first sight of me, but that went off, and he began to inquire if I recollected a cock-and-bull story I had told him of a treasure that Shaw, the shepherd, had found in the ruins, and buried in the orchard. "Oh, yes," I said, "I recollect it; and was there no treasure there?" "No," he replied, "nothing at all. Shepherd's pranks of hiding and seeking had ended in dangerous insanity; and though his ravings were all of gold, no gold had ever been discovered in any of his haunts." I believed only as much of this as I pleased; but I kept my countenance, and asked what had become of Shaw after that. Master raised his voice, and staring me full in the eyes, as if he defied my thoughts, said he died in the mad-house at Southampton. "The best thing God could send him, if he was mad, was death," I said.

"When I came home from my second cruise, which was not for nearly seven years, Heistone was still in his place, and richer, and higher, and mightier than ever. All things had gone well with him, and all men spoke well of him. I remember one woman in the village who had barely enough to keep body and soul together, putting out to me how the Lord had blessed him; how he had laid farm to farm, and house to house; how he had been forced to pull down his barns and build bigger, to store his fine harvests; but when I came to inquire if he was a merciful man and a charitable man to the poor, she said, "Oh no, there was not a harder man in the forest; but see how the Lord prepared him." I answered nothing, but I thought in my heart that the Lord was only letting him alone. It was easy for hard and greedy men to get rich in those bad times.

In my next cruise, which was only a short one, we had a fight with the French off the coast of Spain, and I got the wound that disabled me for service aboard ship. But I was not disabled altogether for a life of adventure; and when I was out of hospital, I made an engagement with a party of scientific gentlemen to go on an exploring expedition to Australia. Peace had been made, the old king was dead, and Bonaparte was dead and buried in his sea island prison before I came back. Ay, sir, what a story that of Bonaparte's will be in the ages to come! Rufus Heistone was Bonaparte in a small way—a strong man without scruples. When I was at Southampton again in the year 1824, he was still alive, a hale and hearty man, with an easy satisfied air, the world had gone so very well with him, that he may have come to think his prosperity the best proof of his deserts. Well, sir, well, we know whether that is so or not; man looks on the outward appearance, but God looks at the heart.

I was away in America for another six years, and when I came home again Heistone's place knew him no more. He had drooped and died one day, without a word, at his own gate, while he was driving a bargain with a cattle dealer from Portsmouth. His sons buried him with much pomp and vanity; but no sooner had the grave closed over his head, than the look that had followed him all through life turned against them. They were fine young men, good natured, better hearts than their father, fair scholars too, and gentlemen in their looks and ways. You could not say—nobody could say—where the troubles came from that came on them, but troubles dogged them like a fate, or a providence, as you choose to consider it.

The first thing was, the brothers quarrelled over the division of the property; they lived in the same parish, and they never spoke. The elder, John, who had the Lodge Farm, married a lady from London, and kept her a carriage. She was a handsome and lively madam, but her pride could not brook the first shock it sustained when her first child was born deformed, and not deformed only, but, as it soon appeared, a half-wit. She never had another to live, and she fell into low, melancholy ways. I suppose she had not much comfort of her life. Her husband was wasteful; he took to drinking, and his temper was soured with the constant vexations and failures met in his business. If it was a bad year for the crops of other people, it was worst of all for him; every ear of corn he cut sprouted in the stack, or rotted on the ground. If there was disease amongst sheep, amongst cattle, it was of his flocks, his herds, that not a hoof escaped. Then came the firing of the Lodge, the farm-buildings, the stack-yard—no uncommon crime in those troublous times when reform in parliament did not bring immediate plenty into the cupboard of the half-starving laborers. It was the act of an incendiary, no doubt; but for ever so long, though rewards were offered by the county and the government, the constables could get no inkling of who did it. John Heistone was ruined, and his wife died of the fright, and, during the misery of it, the brothers were made friends. James Heistone gave John and his poor lad a home, and they had lived together reconciled for nearly six months, when, on the information of John's former house-servant, James was charged with the arson. He was tried at the Winchester assizes, found guilty and condemned to death. And he was hanged for it, sir, and they brought his body home in a cart from the jail, and buried it on the north side of the church, where unbaptized children are buried. The Lord had mercy on his soul, and he died a penitent man; but would you not say, sir, that the sins of the father were being visited on the children, when I tell you that the general belief, and my belief, is that James Heistone's life was falsely sworn away by the very man who committed the crime? He is walking the earth yet, and, to judge by his countenance, God is not leaving him alone. John Heistone lived a few days longer, a broken miserable man, but, from what I have heard, he had peace at his death. As for the poor half-wit, his son, he is to do a hand's turn wherever he can to earn a mouthful of meat; but he can read Latin and Greek, sir, enough to give you the name of a book. He was sent to a good master to be made the best of, while his father could pay it.

These are facts, sir, that all the world hereabouts knows; but over the facts I need not tell you that people have woven now a tissue of romantic stories. One is that old Rufus Heistone sold himself to the devil to have good luck in this world, and that the devil supplied him with strange money to make him rich. Now, I see a vein of truth in this, sir. I have been shown several ancient coins in and around the parish, coins both gold and silver, that Heistone paid away for rent, and stock, and wages, and which folks have kept for curiosity. One of the finest is a rose noble of Henry the Eighth, which the parson has—he took it in tithe. Now this devil's money, you may be sure, sir, was the shepherd's treasure. That is my reading of the legend. What is yours, sir, if it is not the same?

SCROFULA AND KING'S EVIL!

by eradicating the disease entirely from the blood. The FOUNTAIN OF LIFE is composed entirely of vegetable extracts; it contains not Mercury or other mineral substances.

The Proprietor and Discoverer of this Sovereign Remedy CHALLENGES THE WORLD to furnish anything, from the days of Æsculapius down to the present time, in the arcana of Medical Science, which can vie with or excel the intrinsic properties of this Great Blood Purifier. Its value has been tested with the happiest effect in the most obstinate cases of Scrofula, that baffled the skill of the most eminent physicians in the world. No matter what form the dreadful disease of SCROFULA and KING'S EVIL may have assumed, it can in no way be more safely and certainly arrested in its progress than by HENLEY'S GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER. Thousands have been swept into their graves, who had they made a timely use of the FOUNTAIN OF LIFE, might now be enjoying the blessings of life and health. It requires an article of real merit and intrinsic value to sustain itself. During the stern ordeal of public experiment the FOUNTAIN OF LIFE has stood the test trial, and not been found wanting.

☞ Dr. HENLEY guarantees to CURE any case of SCROFULA or KING'S EVIL in the world, and eradicate the disease entirely from the system, or no charge made—provided they will secure him his pay when they are cured.

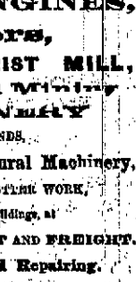
NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES

Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary,



616 KEARNEY STREET,
NEAR COMMERCIAL,
San Francisco. Established in 1854, for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated.

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences, or from virus absorbed into the system! Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken-down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life. In the horrid station themselves suffer until death closes the scene. Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible life-destroying maladies see that they are cared for and cured before it be too late. Send them immediately to Doctor Gibbon, a physician who has made private diseases his especial study for years, and who is certain to cure them in the most inveterate cases without mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places. Be themselves careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse. This solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practised by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing, with unerring certainty, the following train of mortal symptoms, and can be combatted by scientific medical measures, viz: Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, nervousness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, dilatation in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintance, a disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes; pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, foted breath, coughs, consumption, night sweats, monomania and frequent insanity. If relief be not obtained, should apply immediately, either in person or by letter, and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure. Dr. G. will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks.

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and will give to each patient a written instrument, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure, or no pay is required.

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by addressing a letter to Doctor Gibbon, stating case, symptoms, length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines
